Re: Continuance of Satellite Waiver
WTEN (TV), Albany, New York;
WCDC (TV) Adams, Massachusetts

I have been retained to provide an update on the stations since the earlier request for continuance of the satellite waiver was submitted. In that letter to you dated September 11, 2012, I summarized the market conditions in the Albany-Schenectady-Troy DMA as they related to the three criteria under which the Commission considers common ownership of a main station and a satellite, such as WTEN (TV) and WCDC (TV), in order to serve the public interest. In that letter, I concluded that "I do not envision a scenario in which this satellite could survive as a standalone station."

I have reviewed my letter of September 11 and find the facts recited in it remain accurate. Based on my background and experience, which are also set out in my September 11, 2012 letter to you, I continue to believe that WCDC could not survive as a standalone station.

Sincerely,

Brian E. Cobb
