

The Napa Radio Project

The Napa Radio Project will be a community based radio broadcast outlet for Napa and surround areas with a focus on experiential learning and volunteer opportunities for people of all ages.

Napa Radio Project was conceived as a project of the Jean Arnold Group Foundation, established to educate the public about Women's Health Issues. The Foundation has held numerous events, organized local women with think tanks, small gatherings and other efforts. Education of other women as well as the public at large about Women's Health Issues is a central factor in our organizing intention.

The Radio Station would continue outreach efforts as well as crystalize education efforts surrounding other areas of community health as well. School participation, civic participation and welcoming the arts community would be examples of using radio to increase our outreach and education efforts.

We will be an all-ages volunteer fueled terrestrial and online radio station based in Napa Valley. Programming will be based around a broad representation of music genres and will include specialty shows, local programming and education programming. In order to further our informational reach pertaining to cancer and women's health we will write and produce Public Service Announcements that feature discourse on these topics as we work with like minded groups to promote awareness and knowledge.
