

STA EXTENSION

This application is for an extension of previously approved special temporary authorization in LMS 0000008538 and earlier in LMS 0000005171 and BSTA - 20110516ABP to operate with power in excess of the limit specified in the commission's rules.

For ease of reference, the attachment to those applications is also reproduced below. The attachment documents the extraordinary circumstances justifying this request and extension. Following the grant of the above cited applications and implementation of the STA power, hundreds of viewers were again able to view KCSO-LD off-the-air and for the first time since the station transitioned to digital.

Surveys and data from off-the-air viewers show that the number of previous analog viewers reporting difficulty in receiving digital KCSO-LD's unique Spanish language programming has been reduced by two-thirds. While still very concerned over the remaining viewers unable to receive the KCSO-LD signal, the improvement has been remarkable and there have been no complaints of or instances of interference reported to the licensee.

Attachment in Support of Waiver of Power Limit

On November 10, 2010, the commission staff granted a request for special temporary authority to operate KCSO-LD at 1.2 kW based on its application BPDVL 20101102ABA. As stated in that application, the inefficient receiving antennas available to the public for off-the-air reception at low band VHF frequencies has proven to be a significant problem in the reception area. That such has been the experience of a station operating at digital channel 3 is not surprising and has been the subject of significant discussion in the FCC.

In its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking in ET Docket No. 10-235, Innovation in the Broadcast Television Bands: Allocations, Channel Sharing and Improvements to VHF, the Commission recognized the unique challenges to low-band VHF reception. Beginning at paragraph 42, the Commission acknowledged that the propagation characteristics of VHF pose challenges to delivery of digital television service. In particular, undesired signals and noise can be received at much farther distances than comparable UHF, or even high band VHF stations, nearby electrical devices emit noise that can cause interference and can require physically larger antennas at a time when consumers commonly use less efficient smaller, self-installed indoor set-top receive antennas. The Meintel, Sgrignoli and Wallace (MSW) study in Docket 10-235 confirmed substantial negative reception issues. Further, the FCC's own experience confirms that reception complaints typically come from consumers who previously were able to receive a station's analog VHF signal but cannot now view that same station's digital VHF signal.

Comments filed in ET Docket 10-235 reflect the view that significant additional power is required to make digital television work in the VHF band and particularly the VHF low-band where KCSO is located. For example, in its comments MetroTV, Inc. suggests that for antennas to meet a minimum gain of -12 dBd on VHF low-band and -8 dBd on VHF high-band a station would require transmitting power of +12 dB and +8 dB respectively, citing Industry Canada where it was determined that a 7 dB increase was required over the FCC's standard in order to achieve true replication of a station's equivalent analog service area and that, regardless of any possible improvements to receiving antennas, additional transmitting power for VHF is an absolute requirement. The Commission reports that even in its own Broadcast Engineering Forum, conducted for Docket 10-235, the view was expressed that an increase of more than 10 dB would be necessary to utilize VHF.

Throughout the DTV transition process there was broad recognition that the use of the low-band VHF channels 2-6 for digital service would be even more difficult than high-band VHF for a number of reasons, including higher levels of background noise on those channels. Special background noise is present at the KCSO site, including from electric buses that pass very close to the transmitter and from a nearby dairy farm that is a heavy user of florescent lighting.

Khanna & Guill, Inc. Consulting Engineers also offer that many of their low-band VHF digital clients report difficulty in replicating their analog signal with the power limits in the Commission's rules. The problems with low-band VHF are also discussed in the docket 10-235 comments filed by Local Television Broadcasters, a group of twenty-nine local television broadcasting licensee companies. They submit that satisfactory performance of digital television in the VHF band is highly problematic, and listed as one of their principal concerns that the overwhelming majority of VHF licensees would be unable to maximize power due to the increased interference that would be caused to other licensees. Here, Sainte offers up and appends to this waiver request, the consent of the other broadcasters who could be affected. In this application, Sainte presents the staff with an ideal test of low-band VHF higher power, one that is accompanied by the consent of all affected stations.

KCSO's experience with the power initially assigned and even with the increased power allowed in the STA granted in BLSTA 20101108ACX indicates that the concerns of the engineers and the commenters in docket 10-235 are well-founded. Initially authorized at 0.3 kW, KCSO began receiving complaints from former analog viewers almost immediately.

Following the power increase to 1.2 kW as authorized under the referenced STA, some of those complaints abated, but not nearly enough, even though KCSO purchased over 300 antennas for viewers in an attempt to resolve reception issues for their locations.

Attached as exhibit "A" hereto as is a list of 565 pre-transition KCSO viewers who phoned the station to complain and seek answers. These viewers are not outliers, far away from the station and its market. Plotted on a map, it can be seen that they are from the heart of the station's service area. Each pin represents a separate caller and they are heavily clustered around Sacramento, Stockton and Modesto.

As shown in Figure 2, nearly every viewer recorded by KCSO as complaining about reception was well within the coverage area of the analog signal coverage of KCSO analog channel 33 as computed with the Longley-Rice methodology. While these viewers received the analog KCSO, they are not able to receive digital KCSO, even with the Special Temporary Authority to operate at 1.2 kW.

the prime service areas of the station, the area shown in Figure 2, above to have received strong analog service now unavailable to most VHF digital viewers.

While not a perfect answer, KCSO believes that with the relatively small 6 db increase in power requested home reception will be substantially improved.

An additional important consideration is that the station broadcasts news, weather, Emergency Alert Service (EAS) information and other public safety notifications for the Spanish-speaking viewers in the station's service area. Some of the complaints received in Spanish are appended as Attachment "B".

Finally, there is precedent for this request. A request for increased power for WPVI, Philadelphia, filed June 17, 2009 in BPCDT 20090617ADQ, was quickly granted and WPVI has been operating since without complaint. See, BELDSTA 20090619ABQ. WPVI presents a case very similar to KCSO, although WPVI is in a much larger market.

WPVI sought and was granted a power increase to a much higher value on the showing that, while very few DTV stations operate on the low VHF channels, WPVI and two other stations were able to increase ERP without causing interference to any other stations but themselves. Like KCSO, following the transition to a low-band VHF frequency, WPVI received many calls from its viewers who were no longer able to receive WPVI's DTV signal with its significantly lower power than the former UHF analog signal, a power that could not produce enough signal for those viewers who had to use indoor antennas. WPVI sought and was granted a power increase of 6 dB, the same ration that is being applied for here by KCSO. Also, like WPVI, KCSO presents the consent of the only stations that would receive any interference, and like WPVI, if all facilities increase ERP by the same ratio there will be no destructive interference.
