Core Programming

The children's television programming report for the 1st quarter of 2017 reports that KIDY aired an average of 2.0 hours of children's programming per week. In fact, the station did air an average of 3.0 hours each week. However, the programs Xploration: Weird but True (scheduled to air on Saturdays at 11:00 AM) and Xploration: DIY Sci (scheduled to air on Saturdays at 11:30 AM) anticipated airing seven episodes in the primary time periods with six episodes preempted by Fox Sports and rescheduled to air in the respective 2nd homes. During a training session on scheduling the programs' schedules for December 31, 2017, the programs were inadvertently transposed. Because these programs did not air at least seven of their episodes in a single time period, the station did not include them as Core programming.

The children's television programming report for the second quarter of 2016 reports airing an average of 2.73 hours per week. During this quarter KIDY aired six 30-minute children's television programs, but one of those programs (Xploration: Earth 2050) did not air a majority of its episodes in a primary time period. Only three of the nine preempted episodes aired in the program's 2nd Home, but promotional efforts were made to notify the public of the date and time of each rescheduled episode. In the report for this period, KIDY counted only the four episodes that aired in the program's primary time period when calculating the average number of hours aired each week.
