

Children's Commercial Time Limits

A glitch in the FCC's OPIF system won't allow WPBF's Second Quarter 2013 children's commercial time limits certification (which was originally timely uploaded—see the snipped image below) to be opened. This glitch was likely introduced when the Commission transitioned its "old" TV online public file platform to the current OPIF system (which occurred when radio stations were added to the OPIF requirements). This exhibit is to confirm that the lack of accessibility to the Second Quarter 2013 commercial time limits certification is of no material effect because WPBF aired no programming specifically directed to children under the age of 13 during Second Quarter 2013 in any event.
