Media Preservation Foundation (MPF) is a Delaware non-profit corporation organized in 1995. MPF has been headquartered in the Springfield, MA area since its incorporation.

Funded solely by donations and underwriting, MPF's underlying mission is to preserve archival materials (recorded and printed) from local radio broadcast stations throughout the country with an emphasis on historic radio station ID jingles and station imaging. This history is now even more important than ever as we surpass the 100th anniversary of broadcast radio.

The radio station will be used to teach the general public about broadcasting technology and history as well as related STEM subjects. The main studio would serve as an educational environment to provide hands-on instruction and practice in broadcast station operations, station management as well as archiving broadcast history. MPF would work with local organizations and education officials on how this community radio station can be better used to expand MPF's educational mission as well as to be available to provide localized emergency information, especially in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic.
