Our family spends a lot of time In Ocean City Maryland more specifically we spend time here in the off season as a retreat from the hustle and bustle of the city. With spending the time in the off season you can imagine it is difficult to find a good place to eat that is still open. Insert Fat Fish! Fat Fish opened in July of 2015 it has been open for less that a year but seems to be doing well, the couple times that we have been the small restaurant is always packed. The dining room has 5 group tables and a small bar as well as 2 more tables outside, this is not a large dining room. We arrived this last time after 1pm and had to wait for about 10 min for a table (with kids this is about as long of a wait as we will do anything more and we usually will find

Nothing is really opened around Ocean City at this time (since the weather hasn't really warmed up yet), but luckily my friends were able to find this seafood restaurant open during our trip!

I ordered the steamer pot for 2 to share with a friend and boy, were we overwhelmed as soon as the food was brought out! For ~$35, the steamer pot consists of lobster tail, snow crab legs, mussels, oysters, shrimp and 2 sides! The seafood was superb; I enjoyed the freshness of everything despite how it's not really in season at the moment. The mussels were my favorite, but that's probably cause they were the most convenient to eat. Seafood was steamed perfectly, because the meat in the lobster tail and Excellent choice even in the off season.

Creative, fresh ever-changing menu filled with organic, local ingredients. The beet and berry salad is a winner. And bless the chef for a Vegan entree. But the chocolate, chipotle and bacon desert tart needs some work.

Very cute decor over- looking the fishing boats in the harbor. Excellent service.
