

Applicant: North Nicholasville Road Property Owners Association, Inc. (NNPOA)

Date of Incorporation: July 1, 2009

State of Incorporation: KENTUCKY

NNPOA, as a public safety nonprofit, will operate the new facility as a public safety station in support of the city of Lexington, KY Emergency Response Plan and the local Hazard Mitigation Plan which are attached to this exhibit. The purpose of these plans are to respond to any and all emergencies that could affect the health, safety and property of the public within the city limits. NNPOA will support the Lexington Kentucky Division of Emergency Management and provide vital emergency broadcasts during severe weather occurrences, community emergencies and other potential/real man-made or natural disasters. The Lexington Kentucky Division of Emergency Management does not provide coverage to the north central part of the city, which is the coverage area NNPOA proposes to reach.

The emergency plans, which will be supported by the station, cover emergencies such as natural hazards including earthquakes, tornadoes, fire (urban and wildland), storms, floods, ice storms, landslides, human and animal disease epidemics, drought, sink holes and mine subsidence.

Accidental disasters including accidents, explosions, equipment and dam failures, hazardous materials and biological hazard incidents, household chemical emergencies, industrial emergencies, transportation disasters including airline, truck and rail. Disruptions in Services - Water, sewer, communications, travel, etc.

Civil Disturbances and Terrorism including rioting and looting. Also assassinations, bombings, cyber attacks, hijackings, kidnappings, threats of terrorism and the use of chemical, biological, nuclear and radiological weapons, weapons of mass destruction and mass casualties

The Applicant proposes a minimum of (8) eight hours daily of locally originated programming that will feature emergency information and resources as provided by city emergency response personnel including local police and fire departments. NNPOA will also broadcast programming relative to zoning, land use and design proposals within a broader community vision for physical development that will allow the Lexington community to grow and prosper, promote economic development and viable job development while preserving the quality of life that makes it a desirable place to work and live while protecting and enhancing existing neighborhoods, downtown, and the rural Bluegrass cultural landscape. A LPFM radio station will allow NNPOA to expand its reach and broaden its educational efforts in meaningful ways that will provide relevant, timely and credible local information to underserved Lexington listeners.

NNPOA has also developed collaborative relationships with the University of Kentucky, Bluegrass Community and Technical Schools, Fayette County School System, Transylvania University, Employment Solutions, Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government, Lexington-Fayette County Urban League, Lexington-Fayette County Health Department, Fayette County Extension Agency, Neighborhood Associations, Artists, Musicians, Historians, Writers, and Non-Profit organizations to develop educational programming, including instructional, that will improve the quality of life for the Lexington listening audience.
