New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

The primary goal of delineating CCDs is to establish and maintain a set of subcounty units that have stable boundaries and recognizable names. A CCD usually represents one or more communities, trading centers or, in some instances, major land uses. It usually consists of a single geographic piece that is relatively compact in shape. The geographic "building blocks" of CCDs are census tracts, and many CCDs are groupings of several contiguous census tracts.

New CCDs for Census 2000 should have a minimum population of 1,500 persons. Some existing CCDs may have smaller populations. There is no maximum population size limit for a CCD. A CCD name often is the same as that of the largest population center or place within the county. Sometimes it may represent two large centers; for example, Bayard-Santa Rita. Or it may be the name of a prominent physical feature (Castle Rock) or a distinctive region (Death Valley). Some CCD names consist of a name and a compass direction, such as Northwest Union or Smithville North. In all cases, CCD names should be meaningful to data users.

CCD boundaries should follow visible, permanent, identifiable features such as roads, rivers, canals, railroads, and above-ground high-tension power lines. The following nonvisible governmental unit boundaries are acceptable as CCD boundaries:

- All state and county boundaries.
- American Indian reservation boundaries.
- Conjoint incorporated place boundaries.

In very rural counties with distinctive geographic regions, two or more CCDs may "nest" within one census tract, and may have populations less than the minimum permissible for a census tract (1,500 persons).

Census Designated Places (CDPs) - Census 2000 Criteria

Census designated places (CDPs) are closely settled, named, unincorporated communities that generally contain a mixture of residential, commercial, and retail areas similar to those found in incorporated places of similar sizes. The Census Bureau works with local participants to delineate boundaries for CDPs. By defining CDPs, the Census Bureau can tabulate and disseminate data for localities that otherwise would not be identified as places in the decennial census data products.

Each CDP will contain an identifiable core encompassing the area that is associated strongly with the CDP name and contains the majority of the CDP's population, housing, commercial structures, and economic activity. A CDP must comprise a reasonably compact and continuous land area internally accessible to all points by road. (Except where parts of a CDP are separated by a narrow corridor of incorporated territory, or where the topography or geographic patterns of settlement are not compact, but are irregularly shaped.) A CDP may not be located partially or entirely within an incorporated place or another CDP. A CDP encompasses the surrounding closely settled territory associated with the place name. The Census Bureau does not intend for a CDP to be an apartment complex or residential subdivision in densely settled areas or simply a crossroads in rural areas.

There are no minimum or maximum population thresholds for recognition as a CDP. This represents a substantial change from all prior CDP criteria.

A CDP name may not duplicate the name of an adjacent or nearby incorporated place.

A CDP may not be located in more than one state, nor may a CDP cross the boundaries of American Indian reservations (AIRs), American Indian trust lands, or a Tribal Jurisdiction Statistical Areas (TJSA)s. A CDP, however, may cross county and county subdivision boundaries.

A CDP may not be coextensive with Alaska Native village statistical areas (ANVSA), county subdivisions, counties, AIRs, TJSAs, and states. (Exceptions are: Arlington County, Virginia, towns in New England, townships in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and charter townships in Michigan.

CDP boundaries should follow visible and identifiable features, such as roads, rivers, canals, railroads, and above-ground high-tension power lines. The following nonvisible governmental unit boundaries are acceptable as CDP boundaries:

- All state and county boundaries.
- All minor civil division (MCD) boundaries (generally towns and townships) in Connecticut, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Vermont.
- Some MCD boundaries in Illinois (townships only, not election precincts), Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri (governmental townships only), Nebraska (townships only, not election precincts), North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota, and Wisconsin.
- Barrio, barrio-pueblo, and subbarrio boundaries in Puerto Rico, census subdistrict boundaries in the Virgin Islands, MCD-county and island boundaries in American Samoa, and municipal district boundaries in the Northern Mariana Islands.

- All incorporated place boundaries.
- American Indian reservation boundaries.
- American Indian trust land, Alaska Native village statistical area, and Alaska Native Regional Corporation boundaries.

The Census Bureau may modify, and if necessary reject, any proposed CDP that does not comply with the CDP criteria. The Census Bureau also may define CDPs in instances where clear evidence of a place exists, but for which local participating officials did not submit boundaries.

For more information about the Census Designated Place Program please see the Notice of Final Program: Federal Register, (August 22, 1997) for more information.

Welcome to the Frenchtown Rural Fire District
Official Website

Our Department:

Frenchtown Fire is a combination paid and volunteer department. The District has a full time career staff; Resident fire fighters, who live in the stations, work shifts, and respond on emergencies; and volunteers, who live and respond throughout the District. The District consists of 125 square miles, and lies within Mineral and Missoula counties. 7 stations are strategically located throughout the area. Stations 1, 4, 5, and 7 are staffed by live-in fire fighter/ EMT residents. The Frenchtown Rural Fire District provides services to the communities of Evaro, Missoula, Frenchtown, Huson, and Alberton.

Our Goal:

The Mission of the Frenchtown Rural Fire District is to provide residents, within the established legal boundaries of the Fire District, services supplied by trained Staff and Volunteer personnel which may include, but are not limited to, fire suppression, fire prevention and emergency medical aid, with the resources available.
