Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	This program is anchored by Sportacus, a fit and agile hero, whose "kryptonite" is sugar, which makes him instantly lethargic. Sportacus and the program's cast of child characters are challenged in each episode with an issue or dilemma, and are opposed in their attempts to complete their mission by Robbie Rotten, who seeks to return Lazytown to its former lazy ways. The program seeks to impart to preschool and early school-aged children the importance of healthy living, and to help them understand the value of developing sound eating and physical exercise habits, while also providing them positive messages about friendship, empathy, self-respect, truthfulness and other age-appropriate life lessons. This program aired on the main digital stream.

Include any other comments or information you want the Commission to consider in evaluating your compliance with the Children's Television Act (or use this space for supplemental explanations). This may include information on any other noncore educational and informational programming that you aired this quarter or plan to air during the next quarter, or any existing or proposed non-broadcast efforts that will enhance the educational and informational value of such programming to children. See 47 C.F. R. Section 73.671, NOTES 2 and 3.	During this quarter, WJAC aired public service announcements that addressed the topic of buzzed driving, nutrition and exercise, heart health, resources for teens, Internet safety, gun safety, and supporting the Special Olympics. WJAC on air personalities and staff members made several appearances this quarter at sites throughout the viewing area. We also hosted students at our main studio interested in learning about broadcasting. On Sunday, January 7, sports reporter Kari Osep participated in the Unified Sports Experience relay to raise funds for the PA Special Olympics. On Thursday, February 4, Account Executive Joe Sell spoke to students at Northern Cambria Catholic School Career Day about jobs in television. Also, a high school student from Ligonier Valley School District participated in a job shadow program, watching the production of a news program and then the live broadcast of the noon news. On February 5 and 6, WJAC sponsored Snow Daze at Seven Springs Resort where families were invited to ski, snowboard, and snow tube with station personalities. A Weather Experience Booth, green screen with camera and prompter, was set up to allow visitors to try their hand at weather forecasting. Station meteorologists coached the visitors who received recordings of their performances. On Saturday, February 6, Sports anchor Jordan Conigliaro emceed the Special Olympics Polar Plunge fundraiser in Holidaysburg. On March 2, sales assistant Lisa Downey participated in Read Across America at Moms House, a facility that provides services for single moms finishing their education and returning to the work force. On Friday, March 4, reporter Eric Calandra spoke to students at the Mount Nittany Elementary School about news reporting. Station representatives attended college career fairs at Penn State University on March 18 and the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown on March 24 to interview students interested in internships or jobs at the station. On Thursday, March 31, 13 students from the Windber Area School District Media Club toured the station and observed a live broadcast of the noon news.
