Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	In Discovery Kids' MYSTERY HUNTERS, viewers are taken on a half-hour trip behind the scenes of the world's most thrilling paranormal riddles. The documentary-like show is hosted by teens who travel around the world interviewing experts and reenacting scenes in an attempt to solve years-old mysteries and ghost stories. Their sidekick, Doubting Dave, is based in the Mystery Lab, where he conducts experiments that tie into each episode. Past travels have taken the group to the Oregon forest in search of Bigfoot (Dave makes a footprint cast out of plaster), to Toronto to visit a 1,000-year-old mummy, and to a spoon-bending workshop in San Francisco. Kids will learn a lot of facts about each featured puzzle/mystery. The show encourages curiosity and discovery.

Include any other comments or information you want the Commission to consider in evaluating your compliance with the Children's Television Act (or use this space for supplemental explanations). This may include information on any other noncore educational and informational programming that you aired this quarter or plan to air during the next quarter, or any existing or proposed non-broadcast efforts that will enhance the educational and informational value of such programming to children. See 47 C.F.R. Section 73.671, NOTES 2 and 3.	During the 1st quarter of 2011 we aired over six hours of public service announcements targeted toward children. We are entering our fourth year of our partnership with The Art Institute of Atlanta in an effort to provide their students with hands-on television production experience. Also we are continuing our station tours for child serving organizations like the Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts, Boys and Girls Clubs and other afterschool programs around the metro Atlanta area.
