Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	What Color is Your Dog, which airs on our main digital channel, does just what the title implies, as it teaches young teens how to train animals, and in turn get to enjoy the results that they see from their training. Joel Silverman, a well-known Hollywood animal trainer and author, demonstrates how to train dogs and cats with the help of his furry friends. The visual instructions he shows are an easy way to learn the art of training our four-legged family companions. Each week guest trainers will also appear and talk about their experiences with dogs and cats and training them for movies, television programs and commercials. And each week a segment of the program deals with helping teens overcome their most troubling issues with their pets by showing them exactly what to do to eliminate various problems. This program meets the definition of core programming as it teaches teens patience, kindness, responsibility, determination and understanding, and in turn gives them confidence and a feeling of self worth as their personal training succeeds with their own pets.

Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	Fat Albert, which airs on our second digital channel, is an animated series created, produced and hosted by educator and comedian Bill Cosby, who also lent his voice to a number of characters in the series, including Fat Albert himself. The show, based on Cosby's remembrances of his childhood gang, centered on Albert (known for his catchphrase "Hey hey hey!") and his friends. Every episode has an educational lesson emphasized by Cosby's live-action segments, and the gang would usually gather in their North Philadelphia junkyard to play a rock song on their cobbled-together instruments at the end of each show. Fat Albert qualifies as core programming because every episode teaches a life lesson that appeals to kids aged 7-12, the implied ages of the characters in the show. It also reflects Bill Cosby's strong educational focus that emphasizes taking responsibility for one's actions and being held accountable.

The series format includes an FCC FRIENDLY (EI) educational blend of world class adventures in domestic and international locations. Environmental and conservation issues, teaching kids & people of all ages about wildlife, hunting, fishing, ethics and respect for nature and a celebration of the sporting lifestyle are important aspects of the format. The series is hosted by Outdoorsman International founder Buck McNeely. An international adventurer, dedicated conservationist and game management proponent, Buck promotes the enjoyment of the great outdoors for kids of all ages. This series gives young people motivation and inspiration to enjoy the great outdoors and follow their dreams of travel, adventure and exploration. It also aims to teach kids the key role sportsmen & women play in game management & habitat programs.

Program Title	Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids

Origination	Syndicated
Days/Times Program Regularly Scheduled	Monday - Friday at 3pm
Total times aired at regularly scheduled time	65
Length of Program	30 mins
Age of Target Child Audience from	7 years to 12 years
Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	Fat Albert, which airs on our second digital channel, is an animated series created, produced and hosted by educator and comedian Bill Cosby, who also lent his voice to a number of characters in the series, including Fat Albert himself. The show, based on Cosby's remembrances of his childhood gang, centered on Albert (known for his catchphrase "Hey hey hey!") and his friends. Every episode has an educational lesson emphasized by Cosby's live-action segments, and the gang would usually gather in their North Philadelphia junkyard to play a rock song on their cobbled-together instruments at the end of each show. Fat Albert qualifies as core programming because every episode teaches a life lesson that appeals to kids aged 7-12, the implied ages of the characters in the show. It also reflects Bill Cosby's strong educational focus that emphasizes taking responsibility for one's actions and being held accountable.
