Age of Target Child Audience	2 years to 5 years
Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	In this CGI animated TV show, Chuck is the ringleader of a crowd of juvenile vehicles, and like most pre-schooler programming, each episode has Chuck and his friends learning a lesson by the end. Most of these lessons involve the usual socialization skills that most pre-schooler shows fall back on, but these are all quite well-done. The average episodes are fun, bright, colorful, and eminently watchable for kids and adults alike, but there are a few real standouts. "Game On" has Chuck and his friends getting obsessed with a video game, but then running outside to expand their play once they've finished all the available levels of the game. "Vertie's Stunt School" is an exceptionally well-executed parable on the virtues of perseverance and practice, as Chuck learns that even an extreme sports celebrity truck has to practice and flubs his new tricks a few dozen times before he can get them right. I'm most impressed at how the episode is able to communicate the monotony of Chuck's practice without becoming repetitive or monotonous itself, and there's a nice payoff when Chuck pulls off his big stunt in front of a large audience while his friends (who slacked off) fall on their faces.

Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	The "Global Response Team" Rescue Heroes involve the leader, Billy Blazes, and the main team members Wendy Waters, Jake Justice, Jack Hammer, Airl Flyer and trainee Rocky Canyon. The show was created to teach children what to do in an emergency situation. (i.e. extinguishing a grease fire, crawling on the floor in a smoky room, wearing life jackets). In each episode, the rescue heroes receive an emergency call from around the world. In the end, all citizens are safe and rescued. In episodes where it is a character's fault for the emergency, the rescue heroes make the consequences clear to the audience. (i.e. don't play with fire, don't bike on expert trails, wear a life jacket, obey rules of adults). The ending segment involves the rescue heroes explaining to the audience, (depending on the topic of the episode) how to help prevent the episode's problem from happening in real life. If the show's episode topic was unpreventable, the rescue heroes explain what children should do in that situation. After each episode, the rescue heroes then say, "Think like a rescue hero, think safe."

Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	Biz Kid$ is a national financial education initiative based on an Emmy Award-winning public television series about kids, money, and business. The series includes 65 episodes and reaches over million viewers per episode. Using a clever blend of entertainment and education, each Biz Kid$ episode shows kids how to make and manage money by introducing concepts of financial literacy and entrepreneur-ship. To keep young viewers engaged, the series includes a fast-paced mix of direct education delivered by young actors, sketch comedies, animation, and stories featuring real life young entrepreneurs. The show is complemented by a resource rich website, lesson plans, outreach activities, and a monthly electronic newsletter. Executive Producers are Jamie Hammond, Jim McKenna, Erren Gottlieb, and Jeannine Glista. The talented Biz Kid$ team is best known for creating and producing Bill Nye the Science Guy. That series received numerous awards, including 26 national Emmys (two for Outstanding Children's Television Series) and the 1999 National Science Board Public Service Award, among others. Over the past decade, the producers have also created more than 275 episodes for PBS in the areas of How-To and Natural History. The team's experience includes working with Danny Thomas, Bob Hope, David Letterman, Willie Nelson, Gary Coleman, and many others, as well as on projects for NBC, CBS, ABC, The Food Network, General Electric, General Motors, Microsoft, National Geographic, and President Bill Clinton. Other honors for various projects include two Gold Medals from the New York Festivals, the first Annenberg Foundation Award, two Monitor Awards, and two Environmental Media Awards.
