Describe the educational and informational objective of the program and how it meets the definition of Core Programming.	Planet X is a half-hour weekly series designed to profile sports with complex socio-political situations. It's an effective means for connecting teenagers to situations of historical and contemporary political importance that they are likely unfamiliar with. Each episode utilizes virtuous qualities of athletics - camaraderie, healthy lifestyle, selfempowerment- and demonstrates how these are common traits across humanity, allowing for connections to be made with those whose own personal experiences are extraordinarily different due to war, socio-economics, geography or history. Sports are seen as a way to open oneself to a world of experiences leading to the development of a broader world view. Sports are obviously popular on television; however these shows utilize sports as a hook to expand ones understanding and appreciation of the world at large. They also present these activities as ones that are open to many levels of participation by one and all. The sports are participatory as are the experiences.
