Broadcasts include opportunities to publicize events or projects that involve or benefit young people, or showcase their community and academic efforts. During the academic year we also air an 'athlete of the week' segment, profiling high school students who excel in sports, academics and community commitment. This quarter, our major community outreach project was Toys for Tots, and schools and youth groups were encouraged to do their own toy drives and contribute to the effort. Staffers also rang the bell for The Salvation Army. Marcellus High School's Select Chorus among those who performed at our site, as we raised funds for child and family-oriented help programs in Onondaga County. We have an active program of involvement in programs that encourage and promote language and math skills and understanding technology as well as appropriate social media skills, as the path to higher education and career planning. Staffers do guest reading at schools and libraries, participate in career fairs for middle, high school and college students, do classroom talks, as well as station tours and job shadows. We also have an active internship program for college students interested in pursuing broadcasting careers. At all levels, we discuss social media and its possible negative impact on school and career plans.
